Website: It's provided as a free download of specific tolerance responses in DDAO-coupled liposomes. We previously reported the induction of immunization enhancement in BALB/c mice by the covalent coupling of the weak antigen to a liposomal formulation containing the adjuvant DDAO. In the present study we examined the immunogenicity of liposomal DDAO-coupled bovine serum albumin (DDAO-BSA), DDAO-ovalbumin (DDAO-OVA), and DDAO-keyhole limpet hemocyanin (DDAO-KLH) in BALB/c and Wistar rats. Analysis of serum from mice immunized with DDAO-BSA coupled to liposomes containing either 20% or 50% cholesterol showed that antibody responses to DDAO-BSA were suppressed when immunization was initiated with the lower cholesterol formulation, despite the presence of sufficient antibody to the non-coupled antigen at the time of immunization. Antibody to DDAO-OVA and DDAO-KLH were not immunostimulatory in response to immunization with DDAO-coupled antigen, even when coupled at a lipid to protein molar ratio of 4:1. Analysis of spleen cells from immunized rats demonstrated that suppression of specific anti-OVA and anti-KLH responses was not due to either a generalized loss of responsiveness of the spleen or inhibition of proliferation in response to the non-coupled antigen. Using a H-2k beta-chain transgenic rat strain we examined the anti-H-2k-specific suppression of immunization-induced responses after immunization with DDAO-KLH coupled to alpha-2-macroglobulin.Q: How do I use the TerminateProcess function in user32.dll?
